

COSI Bench

COSI provides comfy seating and an attractive addition to the urban landscape with mahogany slats supported by rust-red corten-steel legs. The expansive, clean lines of the design make this a sculptural bench. The choice of materials makes it durable and robust for public spaces.

The strong, square slats that give the bench its character are comfortably rounded at the front.

It is available in numerous versions, each with its own appeal as urban seating.

The free-standing bench is available in two lengths – 2000 mm and 3000 mm. The long model offers the option of a backrest, which gives a completely different look. It runs along two thirds of the length, while the rest of the bench offers new options and possibilities for users.

The bench forms part of the COSI table and bench set, paired with a corten-steel table. Take a closer look at the modern look and clean lines of this table and bench set here.

In addition the COSI range features a park bench with backrest. This is also available with armrests.

The large corten steel surfaces require no maintenance. Corten steel is an alloy that is designed to rust on the surface. The rusting process ceases after a few months of exposure to wind and weather. This outermost layer subsequently keeps out moisture, salt, etc.

The bench is also available in hot-dip galvanised steel or powder-coated, hot-dip galvanised steel.
